Planning a large birthday for a child can be a difficult task because there are so many things that need to be done. There are invitations that need to be sent out before anything else so that you can get an accurate head count of how many guests you will be having. Then there is the wait for all of the responses to look forward to. You have to pick a theme for the party and then shop for the decorations based on that theme. You have to order a cake and decide how that will be decorated as well. If you are having a meal, that has to be planned and prepared. You have to go shopping for the gifts for the birthday boy or girl and for party favors for the rest of the guests as well. Then there is the matter of entertainment. You have to pick music to play as ambient noise and also for the games. A good party has plenty of activities such as a pinata, pin the tail on the donkey or maybe even a bounce house. On top of all of this, however, the host needs time to move from one activity to another and can not be watching the kids the whole time and still get everything they need to done. That is when a good distraction comes in handy. A live entertainment segment can give the host a moment to think and move from one part of the party to another with no mishaps, doing things like bringing out the cake or putting away lunch. A puppeteer can put on a show that is the perfect way to distract adults and children alike with a lot of bright colors and a selection of humor that is balanced enough for everybody to enjoy. There is hardly anybody who does not appreciate a good puppet show. Perhaps young children would enjoy a story told with the help of hand puppets or marionettes, with or without a stage. There is always time to listen to a classic. If the crowd is going to be that of an older group of children, they may prefer a comedy routine with a ventriloquist joker and his sassy dummy. No matter who you are trying to please, a puppeteer is sure to fit the bill. Next time you are planning a big birthday bash, consider a puppet show, Sydney.
