

Google Drawings pioneer Anthony Glenning joins DesignCrowd board

Australian crowdsourcing company DesignCrowd appoints Stanford University graduates to board and executive team shortly after launching in Australia

DesignCrowd (www.designcrowd.com.au) an online 'crowdsourcing' marketplace that launched in Australia today is pleased to announce the appointment of Anthony Glenning (who sold his business, Tonic Systems, to Google in 2007) from Starfish Ventures to the DesignCrowd board, and Christopher McNamara (a recent graduate of Stanford Business School) to the position of Chief Operating Officer. The appointment of Glenning and McNamara coincides with the launch of DesignCrowd's Australian crowdsourcing service and follows shortly after its acquisition of US business rival (Brandstack) in December. Both Glenning and McNamara attained post-graduate degrees at Stanford University. Glenning graduated from the Electrical Engineering Faculty in 1992 and McNamara completed his MBA from the Graduate School of Business in 2009. Prior to joining Starfish Ventures, Glenning lived and worked in Silicon Valley for 14 years. In 1999 Glenning founded Tonic Systems, a company that was ultimately acquired by Google in 2007. He spent the next two years in the Google Docs team before returning home in 2007 and joining Starfish Ventures in 2010. I'm really excited to be joining the board of DesignCrowd and about the opportunities ahead for the company. Crowdsourcing is a tremendous space and growing rapidly. DesignCrowd is applying this new paradigm to a huge market, connecting designers to companies from all over the world. Despite DesignCrowd's fast growth, the potential opportunity has barely been tapped, said Glenning. McNamara who studied Bachelor of Commerce at the University of New South Wales and recently completed his MBA at the Stanford Graduate School of Business joins DesignCrowd as its new Chief Operating Officer. McNamara said, It's a great time to be joining the business. We're really well placed to take advantage of the tremendous growth in demand for crowd-sourced services. Right now, I'm focused on building an international team which will help us reach more people than ever before. DesignCrowd founder Alec Lynch said, As an Australian business trying to grow in the US, it's fantastic to have Aussies with experience in Silicon Valley, returning home and joining our business. Australians talk a lot about a 'brain-drain' but this is a good example of a 'brain boomerang'. The appointments of Anthony Glenning and Chris McNamara reflect DesignCrowd's appetite for fast-growth coupled with an international outlook. Lynch said, We've just opened a new office in Surry Hills that's big enough for over 30 staff and we expect to hire our first US employees in the coming months.
