

iVision Wins Cisco Services Partner of The Year Award at Cisco Australia and New Zealand Business Partner Conference

SYDNEY, 19 November 2009 iVision announced today that it is the recipient of a Cisco Australia and New Zealand Business Partner Conference award for Services Partner of The Year. Cisco unveiled the winners November 17, 2009 at its business partner conference in Sydney.

The objective of the National Awards is to recognise exemplary business partners whose actions Cisco would like other partners to model. Nominations include: innovative practices, architecture-led approach successes, business differentiation and sales approaches. All winners are selected by a group of Cisco Australia and New Zealand Partner and Country executives.

"I have the honour and privilege of recognising iVision as a Cisco Australia and New Zealand Business Partner Conference country award winner that leads customers to their next phase of productivity and growth," said Michael Lehmann, director of Business Partner Operations for Cisco Australia and New Zealand. The Services Partner of The Year Award recognises iVisions performance and accomplishments as a Cisco business partner in 2008.

We are proud that Cisco honoured iVision with its Services Partner of the Year Award for 2008. This recognition reflects what we hear from our customers, who benefit from our services first and Unified Communications focused strategy. This award is a confirmation of the value of our many years of business experience and technical expertise to provide industry-leading applications that help our customers innovate by solving their complex communications challenges, said Graham Williams, Managing Director, iVision.

Cisco Australia and New Zealand Business Partner Conference awards reflect a partners performance in driving differentiation in its business and extending its capabilities to accelerate customer business transformation in 2009.

About iVision
