

Netspace Declares: Faster, More Affordable Broadband for Sale and Traralgon

Victorians who live in country towns Sale and Traralgon do not have to wait for the Australian Government to bring them out of the internet 'blackspot'. Netspace is already bringing more competition to town and more high-speed broadband options to their doors. Netspace continues to invest in new equipment in exchanges in rural Australia, and has just released high-speed broadband (ADSL2+) services for Sale and Traralgon with the reliability and customer service of a reputable, national ISP, yet priced to rival broadband options from other major ISPs. Stuart Marburg, Netspace's Managing Director, said, "Residential and business internet users in rural Victoria can now realise significant savings on their broadband costs, or take this opportunity to upgrade to high-speed broadband for less. Netspace plans are now delivering speed and data to more areas of Victoria at prices up to $50 per month less than some of our competitors."

Some of the most popular Netspace residential plans*:

ADSL2+ 20GB at $29.95 per month when bundled with home phone
ADSL2+ 15GB at $39.95 per month stand-alone
Netspace is also investing in providing Naked DSL services in the Sale and Traralgon exchanges. This is scheduled to commence midway through 2010. In simple terms, Naked DSL is fast broadband without the monthly phone line bill.

Marburg said, "At Netspace we took the decision not to wait for the government to implement its plans for regional broadband infrastructure, but rather to continue to invest in our roll out of ADSL2+ and offer more affordable high-speed broadband options in more regional areas of Australia."
