

original performance poetry laced with folk music and an overdose of comedy!

Three of Perth's favourite performance poets team up for an afternoon of home-grown fun at Sunday@Subi with musings on everything from Rottnest Islands famed quokkas to the adventures of Eric the campervan on Sunday 15 August.

The line-up includes yarn spinner extraordinaire, Peter Capp. Peter was born in Cooma in the Snowy Mountains in the 1950s. Thirty years on Peter is living in WA, and has found a niche as a storyteller and poet. His larrikin style had him in high demand at poetry venues such as the Leederville Hotel, the West End and Clancys Fish Pub both in Fremantle. He continues to host various poetry and folk events in the city and country towns.

A regular at many country festivals throughout Australia, Peter has won both state and national yarn spinning champion titles. Peter is not only a story teller but has a large repertoire of poetry, both his own and those of others, traditional and contemporary. Peter has had three books published.

Jeff Swain is a wharfie and accomplished performer on several instruments, including the harmonica and banjo. He is a versatile bush poet and also has several published books and CDs.

Phil Struthas long been known as Rottnest Island's self-appointed poet laureate; with poems covering such gems as The Constipated Quokka and The Guide Who Got Lost. Phil entertains and delights - if you are not smiling or laughing, you are definitely not listening!

Peter Capp said they had a choice of performing at the Sands in Las Vegas or at the winter Sunday@Subi concert and Subi won three votes to nil.

Our vast fan base lives around Subiaco, so of course we couldn't let the fans down!, Peter said.

We look forward to sharing our style of Australian humour, song and verse in this warm community setting," he said.

Tickets are free and are available on the day from 1.15pm, with concerts starting at
