

SCO to file lawsuit against DaimlerChrysler Corporation

Lawsuit alleges breach of DaimlerChryslers UNIX software agreement

The SCO Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: SCOX), the owner of the UNIX operating system and a leading provider of UNIX-based solutions, has announced a lawsuit to be filed against DaimlerChrysler Corporation for its alleged violations of its UNIX software agreement with SCO.

SCO's lawsuit seeks the following relief:

Enter an order that DaimlerChrysler has violated 2.05 of the Software Agreement by refusing to provide the certification of compliance with the provisions of that Agreement;

Enter an order permanently enjoining DaimlerChrysler from further violations of the DC Software Agreement; and

Issue a mandatory injunction requiring DaimlerChrysler to remedy the effects of its past violations of the DaimlerChrysler Software Agreement; and

Award damages in an amount to be determined at trial; and

Enter judgment in favor of Plaintiff together with costs, attorneys fees and any such other or different relief that the Court may deem to be equitable and just.

The lawsuit will be filed in the Oakland County Circuit Court in the State of Michigan.

Forward-Looking Statements

This press release contains forward-looking statements regarding SCO's lawsuit against DaimlerChrysler. These forward-looking statements relate to SCO's allegations against DaimlerChrysler and the relief sought by SCO. These forward-looking statements are subject to risks and uncertainties including, without limitation, the risk that SCO may not be successful in its claims against DaimlerChrysler and that the pursuit of protections for SCO's software agreements will require the expenditure of resources and may result in further litigation. These forward-looking statements are also subject to the risks and uncertainties set forth in SCO's filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.
