

UXC Consulting appoints head of transformation

Duncan MacCallum has joined UXC Consulting the consulting arm of UXC's information technology group - as general manager transformation. He will build the company's business transformation practice and spearhead the pursuit of large scale opportunities in this space.

Based in Melbourne, Mr MacCallum brings over 20 years of senior experience to UXC. He most recently spent five years with Fujitsu, and prior to that, ten years with Deloitte. In addition to filling strategic delivery roles across a range of clients including General Motors, Cadbury, Australia Post, ANZ Bank, Tenix, CSIRO, Railcorp, Telstra and federal government, he was also a lead for commercial industries, including automotive and retail, and the utilities sector.

Key aspects of Mr MacCallum's role will include the pipelining of fresh opportunities for UXC Consulting and fulfilling a vital bridging function between the consulting, applications and infrastructure businesses within the wider UXC information technology group.

Duncan's combination of strategic advisory and pragmatic delivery capability across tier one clients, sits perfectly with the mantra of UXC Consulting said Nick Mescher, CEO UXC Consulting in a recent address welcoming Mr MacCallum to the company.
