

Andatech recognised in Australian Business Awards for Business Excellence and Business Technology in 2016

Company recognised for Business Technology and Business Excellence in 2016.

Melbourne, Australia – August 12, 2016 – Andatech has been recognised as an ABA100 winner in The Australian Business Awards for Business Technology and Business Excellence in 2016.

The awards recognise Andatech's achievements in promoting excellence through innovative initiatives that have transformed business practices.

Irwandy Tan, director of Andatech says that the company is very humbled to be awarded in the two categories. "These awards will definitely give us more exposure in the industry and emphasise our dedication to our products and services."

Andatech's entries for the Australian Business Awards highlighted the company's significant achievements of its internally built management system – the Andatech HUB – and how it served as the business's core factor in productivity and quality services.

The HUB is Andatech's in-house built online management system used by the company's local and international staff, resellers, and customers for pricing, ordering, technical support, and other integral daily tasks.

Since its launch in 2013, the HUB has helped streamline and automate various businesses processes to adapt with the company's rapid growth, and made many new initiatives achievable, allowing the company to deliver high quality, value-adding services to its customers and resellers.

"For over a decade, the Australian Business Awards have recognised organisations that prioritise innovation and technology as drivers of local and international markets," Australian Business Awards Program Director, Ms Tara Johnston, said.

The ABA100 Winners have demonstrated a commitment to technologically transformative innovation through business initiatives that have propelled them to success in a highly competitive business environment. These organisations not only position themselves as industry leaders, but also push the wider business community towards excellence.

"Those organisations that can continue to evolve alongside ever changing business models will secure their longevity, continually contributing to the marketplace by disrupting the status quo in a positive way," Ms Johnston added.

Each year the ABA100 Winners are recognised through a variety of different award categories that demonstrate transformative business and product innovation. Corporate, government and non-government organisations are recognised for their ability to drive innovation through the application of technical expertise in the management of industry leading initiatives, and for the research and development of high-performing products and services. Initiatives are evaluated based on their transformative capacities via a detailed analysis of the method, execution, performance and outcomes of their initiative. A focus is placed on initiatives that have a demonstrable transformative effect both internally within the business and externally in the wider business community.

Mr. Tan says winning the ABA awards in Business Excellence and Business Technology affirm the company's commitment to continuous improvement and innovation.

"Winning two categories is a great achievement by Andatech and a testament to our diligence and consistency in the past 13 years. These awards will be our motivation and encouragement to continue to grow."

"Our wins are just the beginning of a great journey, and I hope we will have another significant achievement to enter the ABA again next year."
