

Aussizz Group lends helping hand to all partner visa applicants

Many a time Australian partners are at the receiving end due to harsh immigration policies announced by the country administration. To help them ease their difficulty, Aussizz Group – Immigration Agents and Education Consultants initiated corrective measures to visa applicants often struggling to bring their partners to Australia.

According to company authorities, the initiative will benefit married and de facto partners who want to stay in the country on a temporary or permanent basis. If one looks at the challenges, less number of people can afford to bring their partners due to the higher fees involved. Due to the cancellation of visas or denial, an individual can seek their help in the stipulated time.

Going by the numbers, five countries recorded the highest number of partner visa applicants. For instance, China registered 4,850 applicants, India 3,803, while 2,697 applicants belong to Vietnam. There has been a steady decline in visa applicant numbers in the past five years. As per 2017-18 data, 39,799 applicants received their visas. The numbers drastically declined from 47,825 in 2015-16.

For those unfamiliar with the visa system, the country's immigration system emphasises on three visas, namely Prospective Marriage Visa—subclass 300, Temporary Partner Visa—subclass 820 and Permanent Partner Visa—subclass 801.

Citing an instance, Bridging Visa A comes into effect following the expiry of Prospective Marriage Visa. For example, a spouse gets a subclass 300 grant if his/her partner is the country's Permanent Resident or citizen. As it is a temporary visa, its validity starts from the time an individual has entered the country. In the recent past, several individuals were expecting that they seek Permanent Partner Visa grant. But first, the applicant has to be a Subclass 820 holder and provide a genuine relationship with his/her partner for subclass 801 grant.
