Clearwater Filters' experienced installation team of licenced plumbers ensures complete peace of mind when installing any drinking water system and their plumbing work is guaranteed for ten years, a certainty that won't be found from "back-yard" operators with prices that are too good to be true. Trusting a company with your drinking water shouldn't be taken lightly, and with over 25 years in the business, Clearwater Filters is the smart choice. Their under-bench filters are the most effective way to keep things pure and simple, providing great tasting water glass after glass but they also now have the new Zip ChillTap Sparkling, delivering both filtered, chilled water and sparkling water on tap. Zip ChillTap delivers both from a single, stylishly-designed stainless steel tap that sits neatly in your indoor or outdoor kitchen.

Along with the obvious health benefits of drinking water, there are also discernible benefits to having a water cooler in the office, allowing people to take a break from their work, go for a small walk to refuel and often to have a social interaction with their co-workers to break up a busy, stressful day. Filtered water can be part of a workplace health incentive to encourage staff members to make healthy choices and workplaces can promote healthy living by offering healthy alternatives, such as clean, chilled water. Drinking filtered water throughout the day can increase brain activity, as the brain requires hydration in order to function at an optimal level. This can only be good for employers and employees alike. It can also save employers money in the long run, as statistics show that companies can save $1.65 in health care expenses per dollar they spend on health and wellness incentives.

Clearwater utilises quality premium water filtration systems that are tested to the highest Australian and international standards, ensuring guaranteed safety and quality of the water supply. For further information please go to <http://www.clearwaterfilters.com.au> .
