

Corio Waste Management Cleans up with new Website

Corio Waste Management announces the launch of their new website to provide customers with information on the company's waste management products and services in Victoria.

For immediate release Corio Waste Management announces the launch of their new website to provide customers with information on the company's waste management products and services in Victoria. The company's goal was to create a user-friendly SEO website for customers while integrating social media as a supporting tool. The website (www.coriowm.com.au) promotes the company's environmentally friendly philosophy and allows users to explore the benefits of Corio Waste Management's services online. The design seamlessly integrates the company's key messages and values with an intriguing flash banner to reflect a passion for effective waste management in Victoria. Corio Waste Management's General Manager, Matthew Dickens said the professional website informs customers of their waste management options in an engaging manner. "The website provides valuable information in relation to compliance with Quarantine and Environmental Protection legislation and regulations" Dickens said. "With our carbon calculator, customers can calculate their scope 3 greenhouse gas emissions that relate to the disposal of their wastes. They can have fun while working out what's best for them and the environment". Mr Dickens said a key focus had been on improving the existing website to help promote the company's services to existing customers and reach potential customers in new markets via social networking. "We wanted to reach new people and encourage engagement in an informal setting" Dickens said. "With a new website and active social media accounts, we hope to give our customers a unique experience". Corio Waste Management has 161 Facebook LIKES and 20 Twitter followers and hopes to increase their following by providing daily interaction. Mr Dickens said the entire team at Corio Waste Management were extremely happy with the new website developed by Exa Web Solutions. "It's been an exhaustive conception-to-completion process involving input from our staff and Exa, and has resulted in a professional promotional tool".
