

Drinking while watching the footy? Then don't drive until your breath test is legal

*Strategy.
Action.
Results.*

Carrying a personal breathalyser is the logical way to handle the finals footy season if you want to keep your licence and not end up with a huge fine. All drivers must be under .05 to drive legally so if you've had one or two beers more than you should, then drink non-alcoholic fluids and keep testing your breath until you are able to drive legally. One AFL fan was caught drink driving after the semi-final at the MCG and was way over the legal limit. The man's vehicle was impounded for 30 days at a cost of $983 and his driver's licence was suspended. Police expect to charge him with drink driving. Andatech is a leader in personal breathalysers with its new super light-weight AlcoSense Elite 3 breathalyser selling for just over $200, making it a wise investment for anyone who values their licence. The Australian-designed AlcoSense breathalyser weighs just 83 grams, which includes the batteries, and has a fuel cell sensor that provides fast, accurate alcohol-specific readings within 10 seconds of taking a test. BAC results are provided to three decimal places with an accuracy of +/-0.005% BAC. It is tested and certified for its accuracy and reliability meeting Australian Standard AS3547. It also has a fast mode, which provides a positive or negative alcohol reading within five seconds and is perfect for P-plate drivers who need a zero-alcohol reading before driving and therefore aren't concerned with a specific BAC reading. The Elite 3 comes with its own zip pouch that protects the unit and conveniently stores the five mouthpieces provided with the device. It has a three-year warranty, which is extendable to a lifetime*. Andatech has a wide range of personal breathalysers priced from $199 to $279 that can be purchased from www.andatech.com.au. A discount of 10% is offered on all breathalysers during September. Add the promo code 'footyfever' at the checkout. It is the key variable that determines whether law enforcement can legally arrest a driver for impairment. * A three-year warranty is extendable up to a lifetime as long as the unit is calibrated every six months. This is provided under the 'AlcoSense Guarantee', which applies to all Andatech breathalysers. <https://www.andatechdistribution.com.au/pages/alcosense-guarantee> About Andatech: Andatech is a 100% Australian owned company that designs, supplies, supports and services safety and wellness products including high quality alcohol and drug testing equipment, and air quality products.
