

Learn to Trade Offers Options for People Looking to Invest Their Tax Refund

With tax returns expected in a matter of weeks, many Australians are now looking forward to how they can invest what they are expecting to receive this year.

As a leading educator in the forex trading space, Learn to Trade helps people realise the potential of trading with currencies in the foreign exchange market, commonly known as forex trading. Trading in this market is particularly popular as it is highly accessible being available 24 hours a day and available to trade from anywhere with an internet connection, and can be accessed with a small amount of initial capital, such as the average tax refund.

What many people do not know is that unlike the stock market, traders in the forex market can learn to make money in many different market environments, whilst managing their risk to only 2% of their trading capital on each trade. This is possible through the unique forex trading strategies taught by the experienced coaches at Learn to Trade and learning how to successfully manage risk in the market and identify the opportunities.

As one of Learn to Trade's students said after completing the training program offered in Australia: "I can see a very successful future for myself now because of the support that I am getting from Learn to Trade. I would not look elsewhere to learn the skill."

With tax refund dates fast approaching, Learn to Trade is now preparing for a large influx of new students eager to learn about forex and see how they could grow their money in the forex market.

According to a poll of Australian taxpayers [1], 29% say they plan to use their tax refund to pay bills, whilst 21% will save the money they receive. Learn to Trade is now offering people the chance to take part in free forex trading courses across the country, where they can be educated about the opportunities that exists in the forex market.

James Mathews, CEO of Learn to Trade said "We can see a clear thirst for high-quality forex trading education in Australia. Today, trading is no longer reserved for just banks and hedge funds, and we are seeing a massive growth in people looking to learn about the forex market and we expect to see this continue."

Learn to Trade has now taught over 250,000 students how to trade across the globe.
