

Legal startup entrepreneur recognised as one of the top Women in Law

Sacha Kirk, Co-Founder & Chief Marketing Officer at Lawcadia has been named as a finalist in the Women in Law Awards for Marketing Communications Professional of the Year

The Women in Law Awards is regarded as one of the legal profession's most prestigious accolades. The awards pinpoint professional development and innovation, showcasing the individuals and firms who are leading the way in the industry.

Award recipients represent a true cross-section of the legal industry, recognising the contributions of the profession's most senior ranks through to its rising stars.

The finalist list, which will be announced on 4 November 2020, features over 260 high-achieving female legal professionals across 31 submission-based categories.

"The Women in Law Awards is one of the most joyous events we host at Lawyers Weekly, celebrating those who have broken down the barriers to achieve success within their respective careers," said Lawyers Weekly editor Emma Ryan.

"This year has been one of the most challenging on record for legal professionals, so it's great to have this opportunity to shine a spotlight on those who are going above and beyond to offer outstanding service and support for the benefit of their clients, firms, organisations and the Australian community at large.

"On behalf of the team, thank you so much for your continued efforts. We wish you all the best and look forward to celebrating your achievements on the night."

Sacha Kirk, Co-Founder & Chief Marketing Officer at Brisbane-based legal technology company Lawcadia, said that she was humbled to be recognised and proud to be named as a finalist in the Lawyers Weekly Women in Law Awards 2020.

"This recognition highlights our commitment to innovation and transformation in the legal industry, along with our dedication to connecting with the community and engaging with clients," she said.
