

Mearth Supports Filipino Healthcare Workers based in Australia

Sydney-based retailer Mearth opened its enquiries for free electric scooters sponsorship to healthcare workers throughout Australia last April.

Sydney, Australia (14 May 2020) — Sydney-based retailer Mearth opened its enquiries for free electric scooters sponsorship to healthcare workers throughout Australia last April. Following the first wave of donations of Mearth X and Mearth X Pro to healthcare workers, the majority of the beneficiaries happened to be Filipino workers.

These Filipino healthcare workers have been working in Australia as registered nurses, nursing assistants, clinical nurses, and infectious disease specialists.

Several electric scooter donations were received by Filipino healthcare workers in Macquarie University Hospital, Meditech Staffing, and Sydney Adventist Hospital that is located in Sydney and Footscray Hospital in Melbourne.

According to Mearth owner, Ming Ye, "Mearth electric scooters help them practise better social distancing and ease up their travel worries. With some of them completing up to 12-hour shifts and only taking public transport, this is a big help."

Healthcare workers deserve help like this at a time like this. Mearth is glad to have extended their aid for those in the frontlines through their electric scooters.

About Mearth Mearth www.mearth.com.au is a Sydney based manufacturer and seller of electric scooters and electric bikes. The company's goal is to use innovation to disrupt and reshape current forms of transportation to be more efficient and convenient.
