

Self-drive Samoa and New Caledonia

Unravel the South Pacific Islands at your own pace

Self-driving around Samoa and New Caledonia is one of the little known ways to experience these idyllic island paradises. Coral Seas has released unique self-driving tour packages that journey through the islands; allowing travellers to discover the stunning landscape and vibrant culture at their own pace. Amongst the picturesque coastline, Samoa has a rich culture and history. Travellers can visit the home of famed author of Treasure Island, Robert Louis Stevenson, in Samoa. His house is now a museum filled with wonderful and interesting memorabilia. Visitors can find locals in their nu'u village churches, meeting houses and open fale. Throughout New Caledonia, explorers will find a strong Melanesian influence in architecture, arts, crafts and hospitality. The Tjibaou Cultural Centre is considered a cultural reference point for the entire South Pacific. It offers the visitor a unique collection of contemporary art from the Pacific, as well as exciting Melanesian and Polynesian artistic and historic displays. "These islands are a hidden and untapped gem of the Pacific Islands," said Craig Gibbons, Marketing Manager of Coral Seas. "They truly offer the best of both worlds: a historically enriching culture along with beautiful serene coastlines." "Our self-drive itineraries are handcrafted, tried and tested by Coral Seas staff themselves and aimed to provide peace-of-mind to discerning travellers," said Mr Gibbons. "With so many wonders to experience in Samoa, self-drive tours are a fantastic opportunity for travellers to take their time unravelling its many layers." ** New Caledonian Stay/Drive** Stay 7 nights / car hire 5 days from AUD $1,529*pp
