

Special Counsel John Wellington joins Robertson Hyetts Solicitors

John Wellington joins the Castlemaine Office

Robertson Hyetts Solicitors welcomes a new solicitor and leader to its Castlemaine Office. John Wellington, Special Counsel Business and Property, is an experienced lawyer living in Castlemaine. He will be assisting clients with their property, commercial and business law needs.

John is looking forward to bringing his 40 years of property, commercial and business law experience to local individuals and businesses in the Castlemaine district.

"I am enjoying connecting with clients and business representatives and am looking forward to building relationships and working with them.

"Community is important to me, and when I'm not at the office I enjoy being involved in the town and district through my interests in sport, food, wine, music and the arts," said Wellington.

With John's legal experience, he can assist clients with buying and selling, leasing, managing, developing and subdividing residential and commercial land and other property dealings, such as easements, land access agreements and restrictive covenants.

John can also assist business clients, alongside their accountant and financial adviser, in establishing, buying and selling businesses.

Robertson Hyetts Director, Andrew Pickles, welcomes John into the role in Castlemaine that will draw on his deep understanding of property and business law.

"John's local knowledge and years of legal experience means he can work with our clients to understand issues and make informed decisions to achieve results that are best for them," said Pickles.

Incorporating Lawsons, Robertson Hyetts has a long history of helping local clients with their legal needs.

To arrange a meeting with John and discuss how he can assist you with your property or business needs, please contact the Robertson Hyetts office in Castlemaine on 03 5472 1588.

Ends

Media contact: Jessica Potter, Robertson Hyetts, (03) 5434 6666