

Unisite Offers Electric Barbeques for Public Parks

Unisite, in partnership with Greenplate, continues to lead the way in environmentally friendly outdoor park furniture and barbeques.

Studies have shown that outdoor spaces with community features such as park furniture, barbeques and recreational facilities increase the liveability of communities.

“Gathering together with friends and family around the barbeque is a national pastime for many Australians,” states Unisite. “Our line of electric barbeques encourages the use of outdoor space, while saving energy and protecting the environment.”

Electric barbeques are a safer alternative to wood or charcoal barbecues in reducing the risk of public fires, an especially important feature in high-risk wildfire areas. Furthermore, Unisite’s line of barbeques can save up to 50 percent of energy consumption compared to other models.

Unisite’s range of barbeques all provide premium cooking results in a durable, stainless steel finish to prevent warping and increase the products’ lifetime. Three series of models are offered as either a single or double cook top, allowing maximum space utility. The latest edition of Unisite’s in-built barbeque bench also has a fresh, new design, rounded corners for added safety and enhanced ease of assembly.

The barbeques are not only stylish but smart. For flood and fire prone areas, the inbench units can be quickly and safely removed for protection.

Unisite is one of the leading suppliers of outdoor seating and street furniture in Australia. Starting as Site Systems over 20 years ago, Unisite focuses on combining both function and style.

The company has extensive experience in providing comprehensive solutions to councils, schools and private companies looking to create ideal spaces outside. From planning to design, Unisite has built a solid reputation of working closely with clients to tailor solutions to meet specific requirements and tastes.
