

Unisite's Contemporary Park Furniture Help Improve the City's Public Areas

Unisite's unique and modern park furniture range has given outdoor public areas at council parks, reserves, and university campuses a new lease of life.

Unisite's unique and modern park furniture range has given outdoor public areas at council parks, reserves, and university campuses a new lease of life.

24 January 2014 - Unisite, one of Australia's leading providers of park furniture, has consistently provided outdoor areas with contemporary design ideas. These have encouraged increased visitor numbers and lower maintenance costs through eco-friendly solutions that not only perform a practical function but also improve the overall look of the public area.

The company has been providing outdoor park furniture ever since it started trading as Site Systems more than 20 years ago. Unisite has installed outdoor furniture, park benches, bollards and rubbish bins in a wide range of public settings, from university campuses to city council reserve areas. Unisite has been involved in some high profile projects of late, including the improvement of table settings at Curry Reserve for Camden Council, NSW. The style chosen was based on the idea of natural warmth, encouraging picnics and gatherings from local residents and tourists.

The company not only focuses on aesthetic qualities, but also ensures the units installed are practical. They all require minimal maintenance and upkeep. Safety and durability is kept in mind by providing anti-theft and vermin resistant designs.

The website offers full details on the company's service range, which includes street and park furniture such as waste bins, aluminium furniture, barbeque facilities, bollards and bench seats.

Founded over 20 years ago as Site Systems, Unisite provides high quality outdoor furniture and facilities for clients all across Australia. The company offers a full range of innovative design ideas to give outdoor spaces both functional and aesthetic qualities.
