

Wingmate One disposable breathalysers for convenient alcohol breath testing

Melbourne, Australia – April 29, 2016 – Andatech director, Irwandy Tan, announced the launch of a new disposable breathalyser, the Wingmate One – an inexpensive breathalyser that Australians can use to check their blood alcohol content.

“The Wingmate One breathalysers are a simple and affordable way for users to gauge their blood alcohol content,” said Mr. Tan.

“They are disposable and very compact at a size smaller than the palm of your hand,” Mr. Tan added. “It makes it convenient to keep in your bag, pocket, or car glove box, and are great when you’re travelling or in the field.”

The Wingmate One disposable breathalysers are certified in accordance with Australian Standards AS3457, which means that it has been tested and certified to meet industry standards as an alcohol breath testing device.

Each breathalyser tube has markers for both 0.02%BAC and 0.05%BAC, and comes with easy-to-read instructions. Results can be viewed within two minutes of taking a test.

As a single-use, disposable breathalyser, the Wingmate One is hygienic to use and convenient to carry and store.

The Wingmate One breathalysers can be used for personal breath testing prior to driving a vehicle or reporting for work, for workplace and OH&S testing at both 0.02%BAC and 0.05%BAC levels, and for alcohol educational programs, road safety and drink driving campaigns.

“We do not encourage people to drive if they have been drinking, but it’s always sensible to keep a pack of Wingmate One disposable breathalysers handy,” Mr. Tan said.

The Wingmate One disposable breathalysers come in packs of ten retailing at $60.
