

Wolters Kluwer Named Asia Tax Technology Firm of the Year at International Tax Review's Asia Tax Awards 2017

CCH Integrator Wins for Excellence in Technology

Wolters Kluwer Tax & Accounting today announced it has been named as Asia Tax Technology Firm of the Year by International Tax Review. The award was presented at the Asia Tax Awards ceremony in Singapore on Thursday May 4.

The Asia Tax Technology Firm of the Year award recognises the technology provider whose product has improved the efficiency of an in-house tax department. The winning innovation from Wolters Kluwer, CCH Integrator™, is designed to automate corporate tax compliance and reporting locally and globally. CCH Integrator™ represents a strategic approach to information management and reporting, responding swiftly to changing market conditions or regulatory flux. Today it is in use by the top 10 financial institutions within Australia and all Big 4 professional services firms rely on CCH Integrator™ to generate local tax returns and statutory financial statements.

“To be nominated and win the Asia Tax Technology Firm of the Year is a highly competitive process. CCH Integrator deserves this accolade courtesy of its growing use and effectiveness in the region,” said Ralph Cunningham of International Tax Review.

“We are very proud to be recognised as Asia Tax Technology Firm of the Year by International Tax Review,” says Russell Evans, Chief Executive Officer, Wolters Kluwer Asia Pacific & Brazil. “This win highlights our commitment and proven track record of innovation and service to the tax and accounting sector. We look forward to continuing to deliver new and enhanced innovations to add value to our client’s business.”
